News for December 7th, 2011

- Our 1st/2nd grade class will be continuing to raise money for The Smile Train, (which provides surgeries for kids with cleft palates in areas of the world where it isn't an affordable operation). The kids have sold nativities and baked goods, done some photo shoots and are now planning a sponsored run set for this coming Thursday, December 8th. Mrs. Adams says, "each week there is just some small idea to raise money...it is for the children with cleft palates but it is also for us the givers just as much. Jesus says that we serve Him when we serve the 'least of these'...those who cannot repay us and those who we may never even meet to be thanked. It is for Jesus. And learning that truth and setting these habits into motion is a large part of our drive to do this.... to toil not only for ourselves in this life but for the health and provision of others and in doing so, seeing our Savior and touching Him! What greater joy is there!"
- Middle school and high school students will be having midterm exams the week of December 14th. Please go ahead and be helping your student prepare.
- Relaxed dress day and Christmas Parties will be on December 14th. Humanities classes will end at noon (12:00pm) with pizza lunch and Christmas parties to follow. School will dismiss at 1:30. (Students taking a science class will need to check with their teachers to confirm the time of their science exams).
- All students will be receiving modified assignment sheets that will be due January 4th (workshop day). The students will receive an additional assignment sheet for the week of January 4th that will be due on the 11th of January, when our humanities classes resume.
